THE HEROES

fair flowers and herbs, as if in a garden, ranged in order, each sort by itself. There they grew daily in the sunshine, and the spray of the torrent from above; while from the cave came the sound of music, and a man's voice singing to the harp.

Then Æson put down the lad, and whispered, —

“Fear not, but go in, and whomsoever you shall find, lay your hands upon his knees and say, ‘In the name of Zeus, the father of Gods and men, I am your guest from this day forth.’”
